THE COACHER

Red McGhee says:

Some folks have got the notion, bo, you stand at first or third to show the people in the stands the nifty coats youse guys 've got to wear when it ain't too darn hot, or just to wave yer hands An' some o' you, yourselves, I've seen, who had that idee in yer bean-thought you were ornaments. Why some of you, with two men on, just stand like mopes an' gafe upon the beer signs on the fence.

That ain't the coachin' job at all. Your game's to watch the men an' ball an' be the runner's head. If they just stack you there for looks, in two jerks they'd give you the books an' set out plants instead A coach that's really on the job keeps busy as a Roman mob in some ol' Shakespeare play. He keeps the batter's spirits up and jumps 'round like a healthy pup when pitcher looks his way,

He plays the game with head and lungs. An'

some I've known c'd use their tongues, an' use 'em pretty well. You play a sort of watchdog part an' barkin' is yer one best art-you use yer eyes t' smell. It's just a super's job? That's right. You don't cop off the big spot light. Your praises no one sings. But listen-here's a hunch I've saved. A lot o' first night shows are saved by prompters in the wings.
